About the department

Department of Philosophy

About

The Department of Philosophy is a place that embraces the question before the answer, and believes that critical thinking and calm dialogue are the foundation of every scientific and cultural renaissance. It offers a bachelor's degree in Arabic philosophy and a master's in Arab-Islamic philosophy, taught by staff who combine academic rigour with commitment to teaching, to train students skilled in analysis, critique and writing, and open both to the Arab-Islamic philosophical heritage and to contemporary Western thought. Its research is supported by the Laboratory of Philosophy and Community Development and the Journal of Philosophy & Society.

12 permanent teaching staff

1 fields of study

1 bachelor specialties

1 master specialties

Vision

To be a beacon of critical thinking and dialogue that helps build cultural awareness and connects philosophy to today's human and social issues.

Objectives

01
Quality of teaching
Raise the quality of training and research in philosophy.

02
Academic events
Organise national and international conferences and seminars.

03
Student engagement
Encourage students to publish and take part in intellectual life.

04
New specialties
Open new postgraduate specialties and establish specialised laboratories.

05
Current issues
Connect philosophy to ethics, artificial intelligence and intercultural dialogue.