It is my pleasure to welcome you to the digital space of the Faculty of Social Sciences at Amar Telidji University of Laghouat, an institution with a scientific and intellectual mission: developing skilled graduates, producing knowledge and helping to understand the changes our society is going through.

As I take on the responsibility of leading the faculty, I reaffirm our determination to continue on the path of development guided by a clear vision built on several pillars. Foremost among them is high-quality training that combines academic rigour with practical competence and prepares students for genuine entry into professional life, within an approach that makes quality assurance a continuous institutional practice in teaching, supervision and management.

We also attach great importance to digitalisation and transparency as the foundation of modern university governance, making academic and administrative services easier to access, criteria clearer, and information quicker to reach those who need it. We believe that teamwork, based on consultation with scientific and academic bodies and with our social partners, is the best way to make decisions and achieve our shared goals.

The faculty also seeks to strengthen its openness to its social and economic environment and to expand its partnerships with national and international institutions and universities, while promoting scientific research in the social sciences and supporting laboratories, research teams and doctoral students, so as to produce sound scientific knowledge that serves local and national society.

Achieving these goals is a responsibility shared by teaching staff, students and administrative staff, and we are confident that our combined efforts will raise the faculty's performance and strengthen its academic standing.

This website remains a window for communication and information, at the service of the university community and everyone interested in the faculty's activities.
